When the bride, with a voice of quist dignity, and the groom with sincere, manly tone said "I do," old folks, like the writer, who have known ehem both from childhood, silently responded, "God bless you."

The ceremony was measured, regal with both feet to the conclusion that some "odder niggah" had given Dinah "doze shoze." He didn't want any conjugal infidelity around his house, so seizing a razor he begun slashing away at his spouse. Slash No. 1 caught Dinah in the forehead; No. 2 opened a slit in her throat, and No. 3 came frightfully near severing the jugular vein. Dinah screamed—women always owing to a sudden and extreme throat known ehem both from childhood, silently responded, "God bless you."

Owing to a sudden and extreme throat trouble from which Mr. Groves was suffering, he was unable to respond in person to the congratulations of his friends, and absented himself from the guest parlor for a short time, Mrs. Groves accompanying him.

From a bowl in the center of which rose a cluster of calla-illies, each fair waxen corrola poised atop its slender green stem like a regal pennant flaunting its beauty and waving a welcome to its white sisters the rose-buds and carnations ranged around and bordering the mirror beneath, reflecting their beauty again and again. Upon the outward edges of the crystal.

The Harris school, under the efficient management of Miss Ivah Young, is in a flourishing condition.

"A new broom sweeps clean," and Thomson Bros., the new merchants of Waterloo, are doing the sweeping.

Mr. Editor, whoop 'em up on the road question, as the quality of the roads is a drawback to the prosperity of the county.
